A SINGULAR STORY.

A Richly-Attired Woman Marries a Ragged Man and Then Dismisses

NTON COUNTY.

If Fire—Found Dead—Cotton and Business.

See of the Gazette.

See of the name of Charles Traynor, Utica, N. Y., entered the court of Judge Free man yesterday, and asked to be married. After the preliminary questions were asked the marriage was performed. The lady then turned to be the husband, and coldly but quietly tood him that he would lose his train if he waited too much. He bade the lady good-by and left the room. After his departure the lady, remarking to the judge that some explanation was due him for the strange procedure, said: "There is nothing wrong in all this—no crime, no despare, nothing tragic. I am simply pour to say "Yes to the only man on earth it would please and hurt me most to marry. For private reasons I can not marry this gentleman without bringing great sorrow upon both of us in the future and, to place myself being great sorrow upon both of us in the future and, to place myself be-yond the reach of temptation, I have married this stranger. It is not likely yond the reach of temptation, I have married this stranger. It is not likely that I shall ever see this man Traynor again. He perfectly understands that he was hired to marry me, and then so about his business."

After requesting the judge to inform the newspapers of the marriage and to forward copies of the papers to the Baltimore Sun, Washington Critic and Denver Tribune, and laying a $20 gold piece on the table, the lady left the court-room. The judge suspects that Royse is not her real name, or Cincinnati her home, and that insanity is the trouble she feared to bring upon herself and the man she loves.

Another Newport Scandal.

New York, Dec. 3.-The recent sale New York, Dec. 3.—The recent sale of handsome Newport and New York residences belonging to a former prominent member of New York society, which were the scene during a recent summer and winter—with perhaps the single exception of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's fancy ball—of the handsomest and most costly private entertainments ever given in the metropolis of the summer capital, did not tropolis of the summer capital, did not surprise many persons who have been cognizant of certain unfortunate oc-currences which have lately divided her family. Among the numerous ruher family. Among the numerous ru-mors which have been in circulation the most reliable and well founded seems to be that the lady in question has left home and family and with-drawn her property entierly from her husband's hands. The rumor further discloses that this lady is at present in Switzerland, and that while no formal separation between her husband and herself has taken place it is not probaherself has taken place it is not proba-ble that she will ever again assume her position at the head of his house-hold. The husband and her family, deprived of their former income of upwards of $450,000 per year, now oc-cupy a small and modest home, and have the sympathy of their friends and acquaintances. Another rumor is to the effect that, inspired by a platonic attachment for a foreign no-bleman, who was almost penniless in consequence of reckless gambling, she has enlisted herself and her estate in the endeavor to reclaim him, to pay his debts, and place him in his proper position before the world.

The "Iron-Clad" Oath.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.] The distance we are now from "the The distance we are now from "the late war" is illustrated by the inquiry of an apparently intelligent gentleman, addressed to the Enquirer, as to the "iron-clad" and modified oaths taken by "Northern" and "Southern" members of Congress respectively.

His Good Offices in Great Demand.

Washington, D. C., December 6.—
Col, Morrison is having a harder time than Speaker Carlisle. Every Democrat who wants a chairmanship or a place on a committee presents his application to Morrison, who is generally regarded as the power behind the who want places for their friends appeal to him. The incessant importunities to which he is subjected are affecting his health. He declares that the speaker has not, except in the TEXAS. TEXAS.

There is scarcely a parallel to be found to the outrageous falsification and scandal which has been circulated in reference to Texas and "Texicans," as the jolly cowboy would put it. The social status of her people, the poverty of her lands and cattle; the morals, manners, murders and methods of the people of this state have each come in for a share of distorted fact, equivocation, deceptive statements or downinterest of Congress respectively. and moral mechanic or the peace-lov-ing agriculturist from turning his face toward Texas, their character will be known, anotheir aim thwarted by sim-ple facts. Great stress has been placed upon the awful condition of society in Texas. Texas has closed all of her sa-loons on Sunday by a state law; all of Texas. Texas has closed all of her salloons on Sunday by a state law; all of her barber shops and every other trade, business or calling except the family grocery open for a few hours and the drug store open all day on Sunday, are closed by state law. What other regard for the Sabbath? Carrying concealed weapons is just as culpable, according to Texas law, as though the offense was committed in New England, and the law is as well enforced. We hear of more cases of violated law in Texas, perhaps, than we do in Illinois, but we forget that Texas is five times larger than our own state. Texas is a great state, her citizens are a generous, great big-hearted people, and the Monitor can now plainly discover that somebody, for some purpose, has been lying most outrageously about Texas and Texans. Simple justice points out our duty to aid in correcting public opinion in reference to both, and just as cheerfully as we speak truthfully will we try to correct it.

Where a Toad was Found.

Where a Toad was Found. Where a Toad was Found.

Piladelphia, Pa., Dec. 1.—Matthew Lafferty, a workman engaged in making the excavation for the laying of the electric light conduit on Chesnut street near Broad street, to-day struck a hard lump of earth which loosened itself from the deposit. Shifting his position, he placed his foot upon the lump, when it crushed in under his weight and a large black toad jumped out. He dropped his pick in fright, weight and a large black toad jumped out. He dropped his pick in fright, and stood staring at the animal. It remained perfectly still. James Higgins, another laborer, who was not afraid to handle it, took the toad up and put it in his dinner kettle for safe-keeping. Several gentlemen examined the reptile during the evening. Dr. Charles Irving expressed the opinion that it had been embedded for many years, as the cavity in which it had been confined showed no break other than that which Lafferty's boot heel caused. An old gentleman offered Lafferty $2 for his find, which was quickly accepted. The new owner, after exhibiting his 'pet,' departed for Bordentown, N. J., on the 6:15 p. m. train, highly clated.
